

This deregulation will create an unfair market advantage to smaller ISPs who must license these services. The barrier to entry this action would create would ultimately cause the demise of small ISPs, eliminating the competition for the phone companies, and therefore allowing for an overall reduction in level and quality of service due to making the market uncompetitive.